

Golden Hour City

Golden Hour city is a small village located on the terminator of Hearthside where the sun is frozen near the horizon. The city is bathed in an everlasting golden glow. It's notable for being the location of the clinic where the donated human cadavers were studied, and where the first living humans were examined by yinrih healers. It's also one of the smallest cities at Focus to get a dedicated mass router, installed next door to the clinic, so that the cadavers could be transported more efficiently.
