

Oaths in the Knights of the Sun

In the past, when the Knights of the Sun acted as a private security force for the Bright Way, a knight would take an oath of fialty, swearing obedience to his chapter master, and swearing to protect the clergy and the infrastructure they maintained. While not common in the beginning, chivalric romances often depicted knights errant swearing similar oaths to protect any number of people or groups from harm or injustice in addition to, or instead of, the clergy. Over time, life began to imitate art, and the formulas used in these oaths were adopted by individual knights on various occasions. Lodestar has sworn such an oath to protect his sister, and later swears a similar oath to guide Ron.
